

CONTENTS

EPIDEMIC DISEASE AND THE IMPACT OF THE SANTA FE TRAIL ON THE KANSA INDIANS By William E. Unrau	1
MAP: THE SANTA FE TRAIL	10
FIGHTING THE BUREAUCRACIES AGENT BRENNAN AND HIS AUTOMOBILES By Loren E. Pennington and Alan F. Perry	11
BLACK ELK SPEAKS AS A FAILURE NARRATIVE By George W. Linden and Fred W. Robbins	35
GHOST DANCE From Plains Talk	45

CONTRIBUTORS

William E. Unrau is Professor of History at Wichita State University and author of The Kansa Indians: A History of the Wind People, 1673-1873. Soon to be published is Tribal Dispossession and the Ottawa Indians, co-authored with H. Craig Miner. Presently, Professor Unrau is working on another book to be titled, "The Making of a Mixed Blood: Charles Curtis and the American Indian."

Loren E. Pennington is Professor of History at Emporia State University. Alan F. Perry is an Archivist at the Kansas City Federal Archives and Record Center, and is also Adjunct Professor of History at the University of Missouri at Kansas City. Professor Pennington is currently at work on a history of the Studebaker Corporation. Alan Perry's research interest is nineteenth and twentieth century federal Indian policy.

Fred W. Robbins is Assistant Professor of English at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, and is currently working on an anthology of American verse and on a study of Henry Adams' attitude toward American Indians. George W. Linden is Professor of Philosophy at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. He is interested in American Indian philosophy and religion. Professor Linden is currently working on another essay on Dakota philosophy and on a study of the mystical vision in Black Elk Speaks.