

CONTENTS

NEW DEAL CULTURE IN OKLAHOMA: THE FEDERAL THEATRE AND MUSIC PROJECTS By Suzanne H. Schrems	1
SING ME BACK HOME: COUNTRY MUSIC AND THE OKIE MIGRATION TO CALIFORNIA, 1930s-1950s By Thomas D. Norris	14
"A POOR ARGUMENT FOR CONVICT LABOR:" STATE PENITENTIARY PRISONERS AND THE GOOD ROADS MOVEMENT IN OKLAHOMA By William P. Corbett	22

CONTRIBUTORS

Suzanne H. Schrems is a Ph.D. candidate in history and a graduate assistant in history at the University of Oklahoma. Her Master's thesis, "White Collar Relief: The Federal Theatre Project in Oklahoma," and an article in the Chronicles of Oklahoma, "Radicalism and Song," are part of the research that preceded the present article on the Federal Theatre and Music Projects.

Thomas D. Norris is a Photo-Archivist at the Kansas State Historical Society. He received his Master's degree from California State University, and was a research associate for the Ethnic Community Survey for the Sacramento History Center.

William P. Corbett is Chairman of the Division of Social Sciences at Northern Oklahoma College. He received his Doctorate in American history from Oklahoma State University, where he acquired research interests in state and local history with an emphasis on overland transportation.