

HERITAGE OF THE GREAT PLAINS

EDITOR'S CORNER

"LET THE GOLDEN GATES BE OPENED": CHAUTAUQUA AND THE QUEST FOR SUBCOMMUNITY IN NEBRASKA, 1882-1900

By James P. Eckman 5

THE NECESSARY IMAGINATION: EUROPEAN WRITERS ENCOUNTER THE WEST

By Thomas Austenfeld 13

RE-OPENING THE WEST: THOMAS JAMES, JOSIAH GREGG, AND THE RHETORIC OF THE "PRAIRIE OCEAN"

By George L. Sebastian-Coleman 19

FROM MILITARY FORTS TO "NIGGER TOWNS": AFRICAN AMERICANS IN NORTH DAKOTA, 1890-1940

By Stephanie Abbot Roper 37

CONTRIBUTORS

James P. Eckman is Academic Vice President, Dean and Professor in Bible and History at Grace College of the Bible in Omaha, Nebraska. His special interest is historical theology, with special emphasis on the American church and revivalism. He was visiting professor Historical Theology at Dallas Theological Seminary during the Spring 1994 term.

Thomas Austenfeld is an assistant professor of Languages and Literature at Drury College in Springfield, Missouri. He has an MA and Ph.D. in English from the University of Virginia.

George L. Sebastian-Coleman has an MA in English from the University of California and a Ph.D. from the University of Notre Dame. His area of interest is pre-1900 American Literature. In addition to his literary research, he has also written a novel, short stories, and original scripts.

Stephanie Abbot Roper graduated with honors from Smith College in 1988 and is currently working on a Ph.D. at the University of Kansas. She is currently doing research on the changing structure of towns in northern New England with the onset of the Industrial Revolution.